The guests of The Ridgewood enjoyed a beautiful "heart" party in the parlors of this handsome hotel last evening. The rooms were artistically decorated in hearts, the effect of which was heightened by the soft light of numerous wax candles. A large heart was the centerpiece of the mantel, and the electric lights were shaded in red. The refreshments also very prettily sembled the idea in the dainty white and red frosted wafers, which were served with a delicious fruit punch. The evening was most delightfully spent. Four ladies' prizes were awarded and three gentlemen's prizes. The winners were: Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Gaston, Mrs. Rayner and Mrs. Mott; Mr. Tharrat, Mr. and Mr. Chandler. The prizes were exceptionally handsome, among others a cut glass vase, a picture of Daytona scenery in Sepia. Fourteen tables were set.

London Cellar Restaurants.

Before coffee stalls were instituted the humblest places of refreshment were cellars, where the hard up, as the slang phrase went, could "dive for a dinner," with a choice of such viands as tripe, cow heel, sausages and shin of beef soup. Some of the cellar restaurants existed as recently as the early seventies of the last century in Butcher row, Temple Bar and the network of courts and alleys swept away for the site of the royal courts of justice. It was in this neighborhood and probably to a dining place of this description that Dr. Johnson resorted in his struggling days, when he was so poor that, as he relates, it was not every day that he could afford a half-penny tip for the waiter.--London Chronicle.
